O = O : Fractured Oxygen = Ozone

September 20 - November 28, 2001

The New York Times

Weekend FINE ARTS LEISURE

KEITH SONNIER, "Fractured Oxygen=Ozone," Location One, 26 Greene Street, (212) 334-3347 (through Nov. 28). The long-time electric light and power worker's constructions, which resemble mad science experiments, snap, crackle and pop in the darkened gallery. Sizzling sparks travel between copper pipes or thin wires to hypnotic effect, while an electrified fence of gridded wire generates an air of Kafkaesque menace (Johnson).

"O2 = O3: Fractured Oxygen = Ozone" is the title of this show of Sonnier's selected work from 1990 to 1997. Inspired by Tesla's experiments with electricity, The Tesla Wall and other pieces electrify the exhibition space with sparkling light and crackling sound.
